CALIFORNIA'S EAVESDROPPING STATUTE

California Penal Code, Section 632,
(the “eavesdropping statute”) prohibits:

- Use of a recording device to eavesdrop upon or record a confidential communication
- Without the consent of all parties to that communication

WHEN IS A COMMUNICATION CONFIDENTIAL?

Any communication in circumstances that reasonably indicate it is confidential.

Fact based interpretation:

Likely reasonably confidential:

Private homes ○ Private cars ○ Conference rooms

NOT likely reasonably confidential:

Public spaces like parks ○ Talking around the water cooler at the office

WHAT OTHER LAWS APPLY?

-  Article I, Section 1 of the California Constitution provides that all people have inalienable rights, including pursuing and obtaining privacy.
-  Not every act which impacts privacy results in a violation of the California Constitution – it must constitute an egregious breach of social norms.
-  While privacy rights are high in one's own home, the law is not necessarily applied the same when in someone else's home.

PENALTIES FOR ILLEGAL RECORDING

- A fine of up to $2,500 per violation
- Imprisonment for up to one year
- Possibly both a fine and imprisonment

EXCEPTIONS TO THE EAVESDROPPING STATUTE

No violation if it is known by all parties to the confidential communication that the communication is being overheard or recorded.

REASONABLE EXPECTATIONS IN SELLER'S HOME

- Facts and circumstances provide the answer
- Consider devices like Amazon Echo and Google Home that record continuously
- When in doubt, disclose possible recording
- Don't be the test case for what is "reasonable"

ADVICE TO SELLERS

-  A prudent seller will make the disclosure to avoid claims of unlawfully invading private or confidential communications.
-  Disclosing the existence of surveillance equipment makes it very difficult for such persons to make a claim that there is a reasonable expectation of privacy or they were unknowingly recorded.
-  C.A.R.'s Residential Listing Agreement, Form RLA, makes this recommendation in paragraph 13.

WHAT SHOULD THE NOTICE SAY?

There is no precise language that creates a “safe harbor”

These examples would likely be sufficient:

Notice

This property is being monitored by surveillance equipment.

Smile, and please talk clearly; you are being recorded.

Welcome to my home.
Recording equipment on the premises.

Where Should Notices be Posted?

- On or near the front door or other entrance to the property
- Placement should be in a location that is likely to be seen
- Consider door may be left open during an open house so multiple signs may be prudent

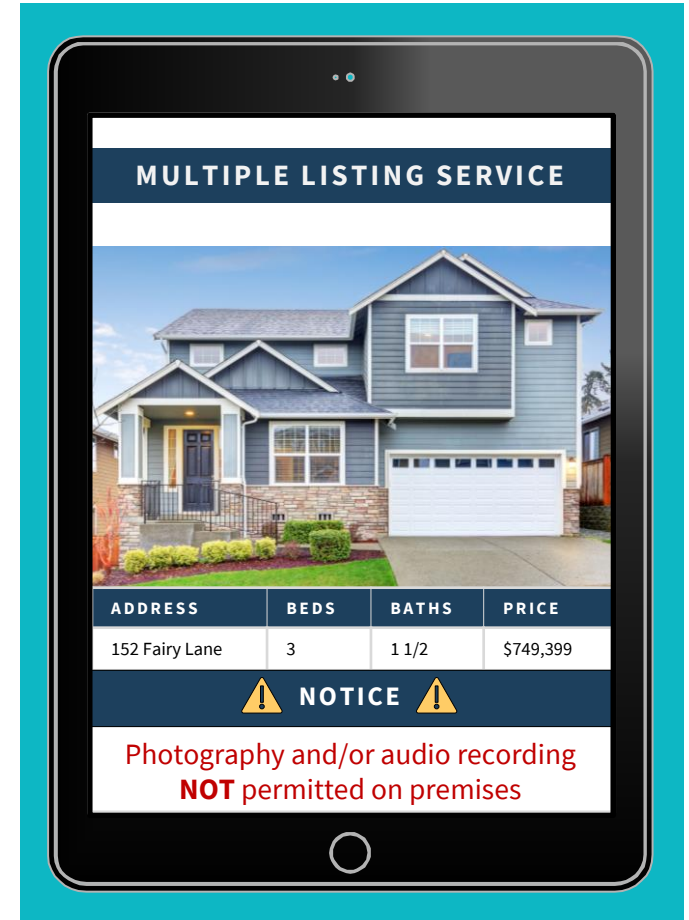

Keep Client Communications Private

Whether or not a notice has been posted on the listed property, it is always a good idea to have private conversations outside the presence or property of the listing agent or seller

PREVENTING RECORDINGS

- Sellers may request that photos or videos not be taken
- Sellers may even ask you to put such notices in the MLS
- Policing may prove difficult or impossible
- Smart phones and other small devices with cameras are difficult to detect so managing Seller expectations is important

Protecting Seller's Valuables

- Sellers should be advised to move or safeguard valuables as early as possible and always before marketing begins
- Sellers should be advised to consult their insurance company to determine what is required or suggested to assure that coverage will be available in the event of a loss.
